

“A Youth Worker must be the symptom of a Church's concern for young people – not the sole arm of the Church's activity or mission amongst young people.”

Introduction

This guide is designed to assist you in the preliminary stages of considering employment of a youth worker. As an initial document, it aims to signpost you towards other appropriate resources and to give guidance as to when you should ideally call on the resources available to you from the Diocesan Mustard Seed Team.

Firstly, we're delighted that this is something you, your parish and your community are considering! Youth work is a challenging and wonderful opportunity in any community and when done well can be transformative, life enhancing and faith building. However, it is also a huge responsibility, and this guide will hopefully assist you in avoiding the most common pitfalls and in ironing out any issues as you develop your vision and put the practicalities in place.

Essential Reading

1. Employing Youth and Children's Workers, Paul Godfrey and Nic Sheppard; Church House Publishing, 2008 (Ask a member of the Mustard Seed Team for a copy).

2. Employing a Youth Worker resource pack from the Diocese of Portsmouth.

https://cofeportsmouth.contentfiles.net/media/assets/file/DOP_Employing_a_YouthWorker_45pHNeH.pdf
(Thanks to Ben Mizen for his permission to reference this.)

3. Some top tips for consideration from Ali Campbell at The Resource can be found here

<http://theresource.org.uk/employing-childrens-youth-family-workers/>

4. Safer Recruitment Guidelines <https://www.chelmsford.anglican.org/safeguarding-policyand-practice-guidance>

Research and Preparation

All these resources encourage any church, project or group considering employment to ask themselves some key questions at a very early stage. This might be done in the context of a church meeting, PCC meeting, at a Parish Council, Community Services or Churches Together meeting or in smaller gatherings.

The gist of these questions should be as follows:

- Why do we want a youth worker?
- What are our expectations of a youth workers?
- What do the young people want and need?

Other important research which can be done early on involves visiting, (perhaps more than once) other projects or parishes in your area where youth work happens. They may have a volunteer team, an employed worker or deliver youth work jointly with others. It's all useful expertise.

Ask questions of the leaders and young people. Get ideas, watch, and learn – it will be invaluable as you consider the way forward.

The Mustard Seed Team will be able to help with suggesting appropriate groups to visit in your locality.

What are the options?

The possibilities are endless – churches in this Diocese employ youth workers on a full and part time basis; as part of a student arrangement with a College (Cliff College or St Mellitus are examples); on a Gap Year Placement scheme (through the New Wine Discipleship Year or Time for God, amongst others). You might also employ in partnership with other local churches, through the Council, in connection with a School or Charity or as a Mission and Ministry Unit.

Where to Start?

You might decide to hold a vision day or evening to gather those who have a particular stake in the youth work – parents, carers, teachers, other organisations, young people themselves, uniformed groups...whatever works for you.

These discussions need to be brought to the appropriate committee within your church or organisation's decision-making process before you can move on. Don't underestimate how long this can take – and consider ways in which you can present your ideas and gain further input.

This is a project that the Mustard Seed Team can help with; perhaps providing some facilitation to get people talking or supporting your PCC presentation or some other guidance on the next steps if you are further on in the process.

Other Issues to Consider

It is vital to gather an Appointments Team as early as possible, including young people, who cover a wide variety of skills and interests and who have enough time to invest for the next few months. Perhaps someone with legal or accounting expertise, a background in recruitment or human resources, artistic and design skills or a great administrator? Regardless of whom you choose, they should be fully in support of the vision for youth work that has been agreed and discussed.

Depending on which route you go down (see above 'What are the Options?') you might have a wider reach of people to include. Members of the Mustard Seed Team can be invited for their expertise and, depending on availability, may be able to commit more fully than just one meeting.

Finance is a process which cannot be rushed – but it is also important that it doesn't lead the process ("we can only employ for 12 hours a week because we only have £???"). Finance support can be found in a variety of places: Your local Community Voluntary Services (CVS) will have a database of grants and funds available. Is there someone who works in funding who might be able to help? Talk to the church, treasurer, budget setters early on. It's important to have a good balance of realism and faithful ambition here! All the listed resources have guidance and ideas on funding and securing on-going finance.

Paperwork, Policies & Procedures should be in place as much as possible before moving towards advertising or appointment. Appropriate support and legalities must be in place before proceeding with advertising and recruiting. Useful templates may be obtained via the Mustard Seed Team.

Local Support

The Mustard Seed Team are available to support you throughout this process – it is usually helpful if you contact them via email or phone call in the early stages of your discussions just to keep them in the picture. Then invite them along to a Vision event or more detailed discussions when the time comes.

The Mustard Seed Team can be involved at several levels through the process: guidance on advertising and drawing up job descriptions and specifications, interview panels, induction periods and the supervision and management of a worker once in post.

We can also support you with practicalities around training, payroll and deanery interaction. Every situation is different, but we are here to be used so get in touch!

Mustard Seed Team contact details - <https://www.chelmsford.anglican.org/children-youth/mustard-seed-team>